Toothprints®

Toothprints® was developed by a pediatric dentist who began using dental bite impressions as a way of safeguarding his own child, and other young patients. This thermoplastic wafer records the size and shape of a child's teeth, the tooth position within the arch, and the relationship between upper and lower jaws. Like fingerprints, dental imprints are unique to every person, so bite impressions serve an accurate method of identification--not even identical twins have the same bite characteristics. A Toothprints® impression also captures saliva, which is a powerful source of human scent, thus making the wafer effective for scent-dog tracking. The saliva also provides a DNA sample.

The dentist softens the patented thermoplastic wafer in a water bath, and instructs the child to "open big, big like a lion then bite down tight while I count to 10." It's that simple. Parents keep the Toothprints® disc at home in a reclosable bag (provided), for confidentiality and quick access.

Yearly updates of Toothprints® bite impressions are ideal. If not possible, it is recommended that the initial impression be taken at age 3 (or after all the primary teeth have erupted), updated at age 7 or 8 (or after the upper and lower incisors and the first permanent molars have erupted), and then again at age 12 or 13 (or after all permanent teeth, excluding 3rd molars, have erupted).
